Figure 4.4c This example from Crete was actually the building that immediately came into my mind when I first saw MS6 and MS12. (Arrow points to blocked up window) Unlike the example above this was not a primary residence it was in fact a commercial premises showing that these types of building are not solely residential. Constructed at the end of the 19th/early 20th century it was a kafenion designed to serve the customers of the olive press (corner of building visible in the foreground) and the blacksmith's workshop that adjoined it to the back. The path was in fact the contemporary main road and the main route through the Pediada linking Lasithi with Heraklion until the construction of the new road in the 1920's. The flatter roof is mainly a result of the use of 'mesodokia' timber supports (as can be seen) rather than stone vaults as on Kythera.

Figure 4.5 MS13: This is set up as a permanent residences with both a kitchen complete with oven and a hearth inside the main living space. The quirk is the underground mandra indicated by the arrow

Figure 4.8 MS9 built down by the terraces against the escarpment. Essentially the escarpment is the back wall of the building with 3 walls built. Arrows on right pointing to carved out niche in the rock and the join between the wall and the rockface.

Figure 4.10 Views of the calderimi running down the terrace to the gorge, according to ethnographic testimony this may have lead to the old more direct route to Makrea Skala from Mitata across the gorge floor.

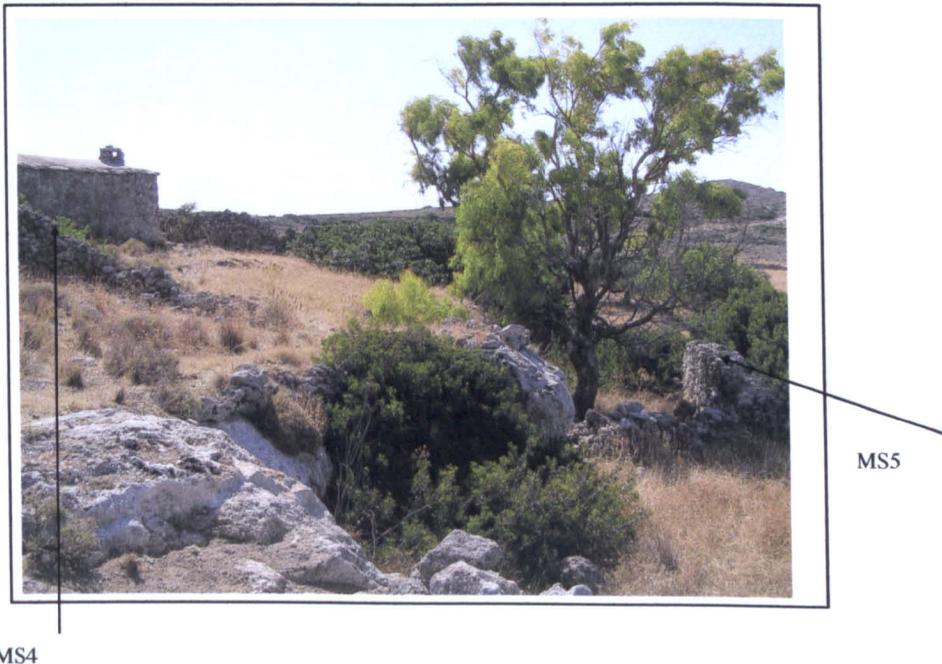

Figure 4.13 View of MS4 and the connecting walls leading down forming a sort of enclosed animal pen in MS5. To achieve this both the natural gradient of the land has been used and the interconnecting system of field walls already in place. Whether this was an original feature or a later modification is unknown

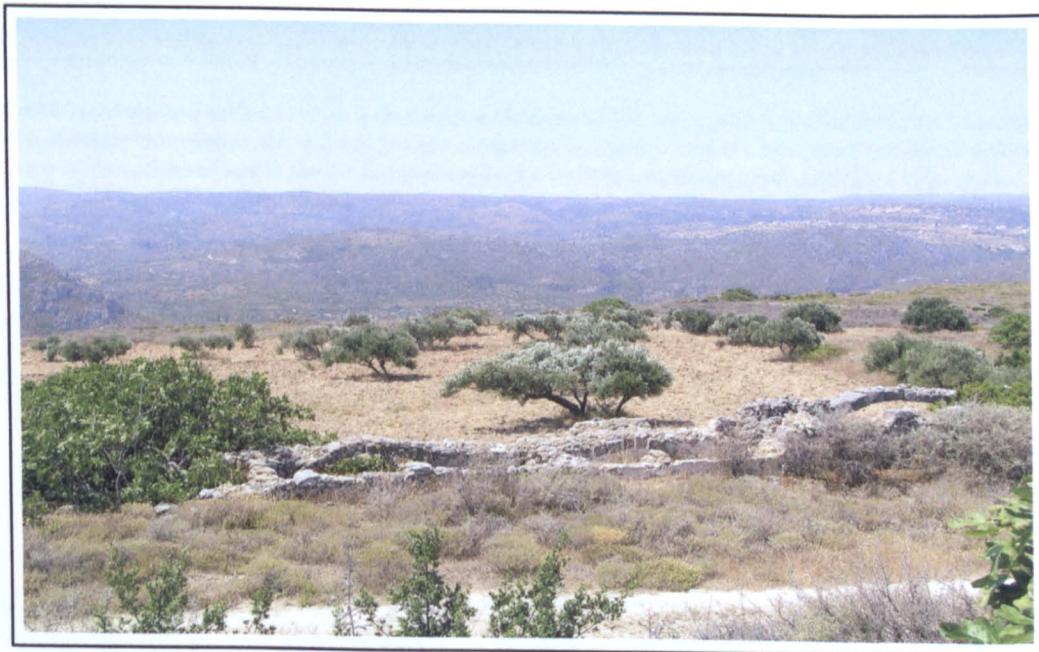

Figure 4.14 MS15, long narrow structure possibly used for stabling larger pack animals. Apart from the unusual features it is also the only structure to be located directly on the large terrace.

On the right the main calderimi which runs throughout the cluster and joins up with the calderimi that leads to Ag. Moni

From the ethnographic evidence, this required yearly maintenance to ensure it remained waterproof and did not collapse.
Cross section from collapsed roof to the left and an example of a surviving, maintained roof on KCH2a to the right.
Note the irregular appearance of the vaulted roof.

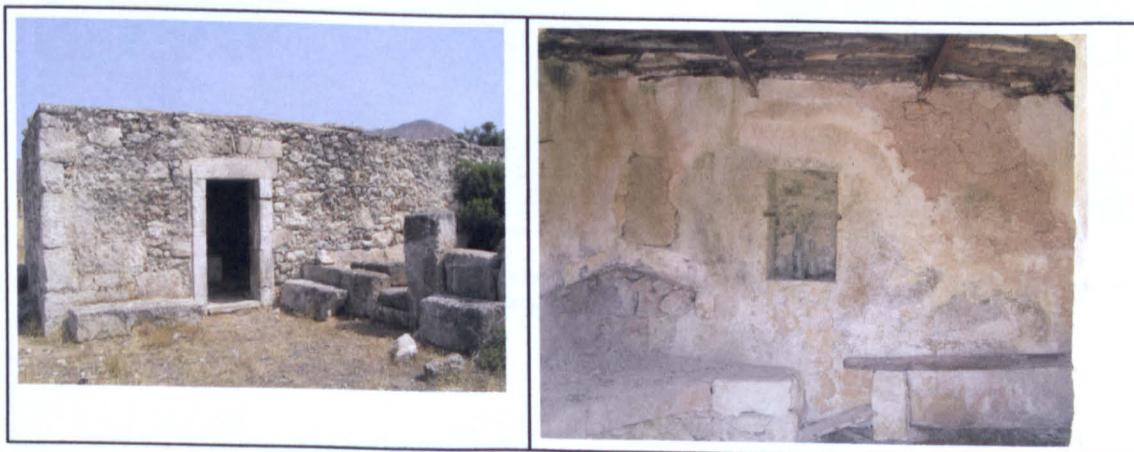

Figure 4.17 KCH4 This building stands out both in its exterior finishing and interior features, resembling turn of the century village residences rather than the vaulted spitakia found on site.

Figure 4.18a) General views of KCH3, a compound structure with a series of entrances and distinct and separate non communicating spaces.

Figure 4.18b) Closeup of double entrance to potential animal section (suggested by the very low height of the entrance Smith 2004) and closeup of the stone hearth and collapsed doorway from the 'living' space.

Figure 4.19 Reuse and adaptation. Left: Older adaptation of structure from KCH7 Compound structure was essentially chopped up to create new divisions and spaces as a result the new entrance is not aligned with the vaults inside. Right Modern renovation of an older structure KCH1

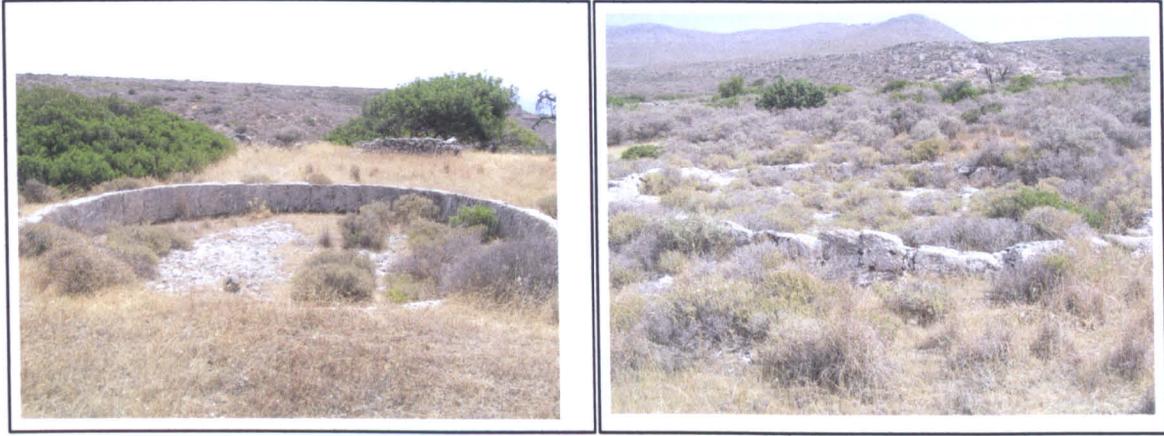

Figure 4.22a Threshing floors from Kokkinochorafa. Note the difference in quality of construction. Example on the left is by far the finest example from both hamlets

*from the name Firos possibly originally from Mitata, residency in Aloizianika could perhaps suggest marriage in that village.

Figure 5.2 A selection of contacts outside of Mitata from the documents of Charamountanis. Note the variety from commercial agreements to personal obligations and social responsibilities.

1835 = Giorgios Aronis (son) of Panagiotis Public Notary (Notarios Dimosios) of Kastrisos. Note the Italianate phrasing of the title 'Notarios' keeping with other Italianate jargon for documents, agreements and official position such as 'privato', officio etc.

1864 signature reads in translation Ioannis Charamountanis (son) of the deceased Stavrianos, Sumvoleografos of Mylopotamos. Sumvoleografos is to this day the formal Greek term for Notary. The term itself originally came into use in 1840 used alongside the more archaic greek form of mnimon (Babiniotis 2006).

b) Examples of purchases in drachmas from Charamountanis showing that overall prices align well with the average ones above.

| Item purchased  | Price quoted | Converted Price* | Source         |
|---|--------------|------------------|----------------|
| 2 fields  | 2 pounds     | 55 drachmas      | Ch14/3650 1864 |

| 1 olive tree 2 nd quality                  | 1 pound      | 28 drachmas      | A20/ 3779 1850 |

- rounded up to nearest drachma

c) Converted prices for fields and olive trees.

Exchange rate used calculated from Charamountanis 1866 4395 get the exchange rate of 30 distila/180 drachmas so 1 distila =6 drachmas 1865: Charamountanis 3909 180 distila =39 pounds sterling so 1 distila =52 pence

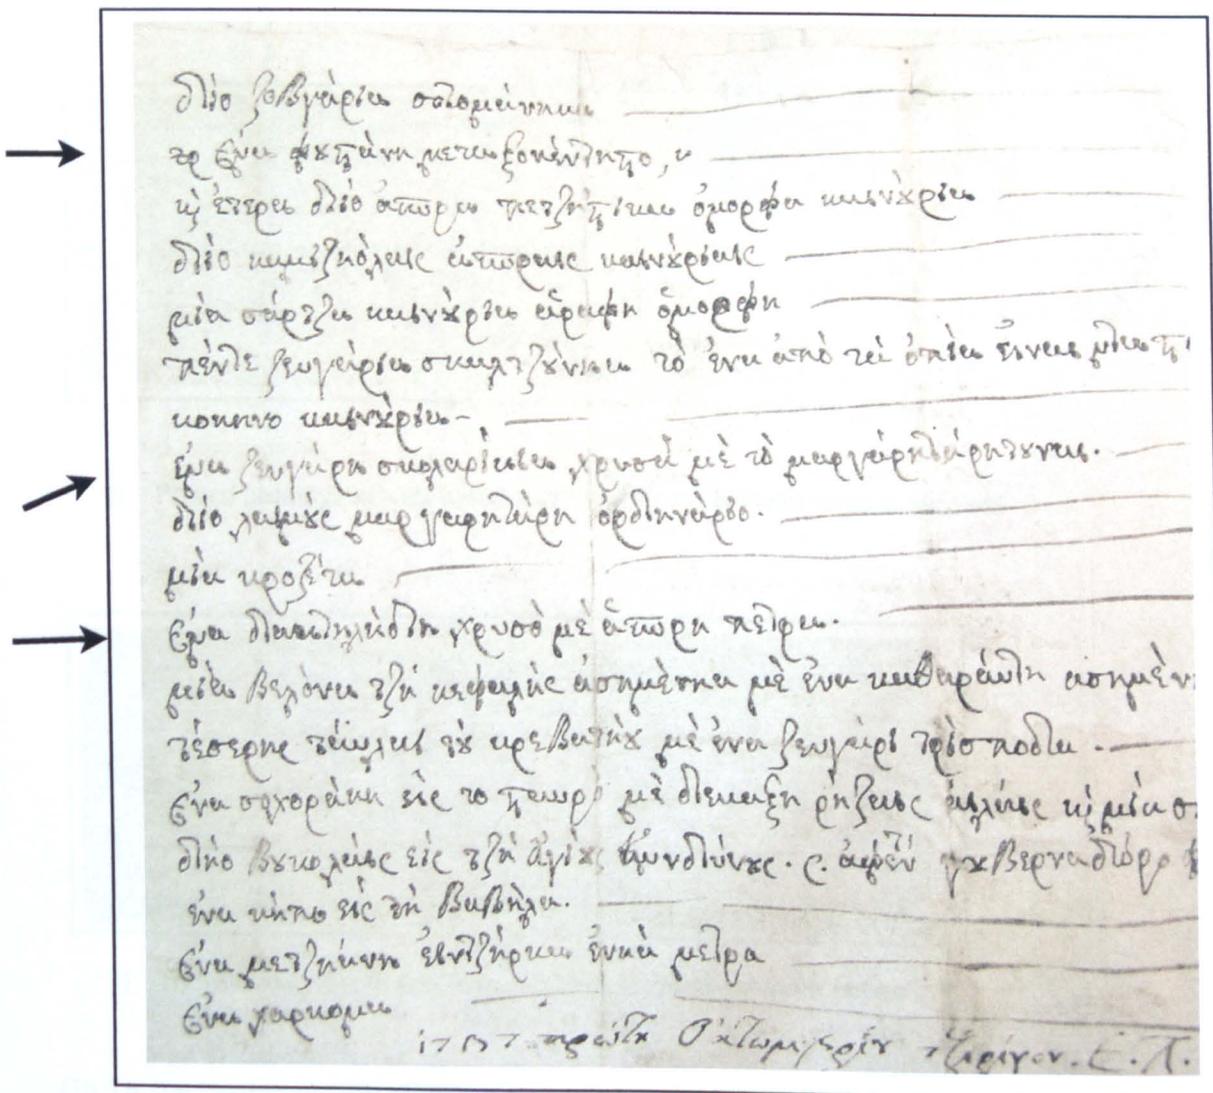

Figure 5.5 Excerpt from dowry list from Papa Dimitris Sklavos folio dated 1737- note different handwriting from the notary suggests it was filed by the notary rather than written by him. Items of note here are high status goods. Arrowed items as they appear in the document: One silk embroidered dress, one pair of earrings, gold with pearls, one ring gold with a white stone.

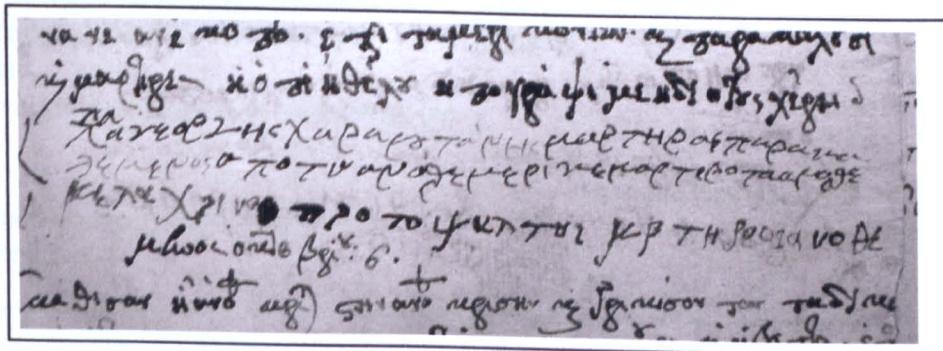

Fig 5.6 The Language of the state

- a) a) 1861 Aronis: shows the varying levels of basic literacy. This is a particularly good example as all the witnesses are from the extended Aronis family, aiding the comparison. Taking the notary's signature as the standard it is easy to identify the differing levels of skill and comprehension of fundamental rules about accents e.g Manolis Aronis spells Aronis without the omega and arbitrarily accents the l in Manolis.

- b) 1865 Charamountanis. In this case the witness Athanasios Protopsaltis has a signature barely recognisable and the wrong form of sigma used at the end of the witness (μαρτιρασ)

- c) From Papa Dimitris Sklavos 1728 showing many of the problems with interpreting these documents particularly in view of some rather rudimentary handwriting skills. I can just about decipher a Charamountanis and a Protopsaltis amongst the witnesses

Monday 8th March 1865, in the south volto of the notary's office

- The following parties appeared before the notary and witnesses:
  1. Thodoris Firos d.Dimitrios
  2. Panagiotis Firos of Ioannis from Mitata

- Asked the notary to draw up the following document
  - A) As Thodoris sold to Panagiotis a variety of landholdings in Smyrna, amongst which is included 2 terraces of orchard with trees and land/field beyond the orchard and at the edges at the afentika in Mitata. At the time the size of the landholdings was not well documented as in reality the aforementioned orchard is split into two pieces with a different owner in the middle between them. The field/land is outside this and for this reason Thodoris wanted to take Panagiotis to the authorities/courts of the island to get him to give up one of the orchard pieces. As he now realises that this would in fact be fraud he withdraws from all possible forms of action and declares that all the orchards, land and trees at Afentika have been handed over and been paid for and guarantees that no further claims will be made against Panagiotis in the future.
  - B) Panagiotis in order to honour the fact they are related, gives to Thodoris 7 pillar dollars which make up 1 pound, 10 shillings and 4 pence to cover the expenses he incurred. With this settlement Thodoris is very grateful and completely paid and satisfied.

- The notary wrote this as it was dictated to him
- Clarifies that Thodoris has already harvested the olive trees and Panagiotis promises not to ask for anything in return.

  2. Ioannis Firos of Nikolaos, his son
both residents of Mitata
- They asked the notary to draw up this document.
- After the death of d.Ioannis Firos d.Nikolaos father and grandfather to the respective parties involved there was a conflict between (document torn.....) came to the following agreement

- A) first as Ioannis got married a few years ago and lives in a separate house and has not received anything from his paternal share, his father agrees today to hand over the following land holdings which form his legal share/inheritance under the rules and obligations outlined below.
- B) the aforementioned deceased Ioannis Firos d.Nikolaos in the contract of 5/17th September 1859 in the notarial books of S. Simitekolos... admitted that he had received many years of service from his grandson and had left him monthly allowance past to a total of 10 years along with interest. The parties having reached an agreement, father and son cancel the aforementioned contract and has no further claim over the allowance and asks for nothing from his father.
- C) thirdly the land holdings mentioned in the first section are handed over by Nikolaos to his son and consist of the following
  - A field at Kokkinochorafa both above and below the road near to Kosmas Protosaltis d.Giorgios and the inheritance of d.Panagiotis Firos
  - Part of the field at Kontradi Mitata, north of the small wall where there are two artichoke plants in a straight line from one side to the other near to the road
  - 2 small terraces of field in the garden near to the above place at Mitata Sklavianika. One of these terraces is the upper garden whose income will go to Nikolaos for the rest of his life
  - Adds the open field at Pelades, 1 misopinakio.....
- D) 4th the landholdings of the previous section are to become part of the legal 'share'/entitlement of Ioannis . He has agreed to not claim further land as part of his legal share from his father
- E) 5th the parties have agreed that everything that is written in the will of d.Ioannis Firos d.Nikolaos in this notary's files for each party shall stand as dictated by the deceased for now and for ever. Clarified that the largest of the olive trees at Louri Starari which was left as inheritance for Ioannis the right to it is to belong to his father Nikolaos.
