Quotations of laws containing friendship vocabulary

Notes on citation, translation and presentation

Quotations have been taken from the oldest available copy, as provided by Liebermann, unless otherwise stated.

The Anglo-Saxon lawcodes are famously difficult to translate, as often the ordinances are in need of some interpretation to make sense of the provisions. The lawcodes have been translated by Liebermann, Attenborough, Robertson, and partly by Whitelock and my debt to all has been reflected in my inclusion of all these works in the bibliography. However, these translations are very much embedded in old-fashioned debates of the interpretation of these codes, notably with respect to the ‘feud’, and additionally, often try to introduce a recognisable and modern, legal vocabulary. As debates over the interpretation of these codes have changed, and as this thesis does not try to embed these codes in an unbroken, legal tradition, new working translations have been provided in the following. These translations are my own, but are indebted to the efforts of above-mentioned translators and may occasionally overlap. I have tried to stay as close to the text as possible, yet where needed, interpretations have been added in square brackets to help the reader understand the meaning of the provisions. Freond/amicus and freondscipe/amicitia have consistently been translated with ‘friend’ and ‘friendship’ as this appendix is not the place to discuss the interpretation of these concepts.

The codes have been divided into a pre-Wulfstanian, and a Wulfstanian section. The interrelated codes of Wulfstan have been clustered, rather than presented in Liebermann’s sequential progression.

I. PRE-WULFSTANIAN CODES

Æthelberht [Abt 65], Gesetze, I, p. 7.

65  ‘Gif þeoh gebrocen weorðeþ, XII scillingum gebete.
65.1 Gif he healt weorð, þær motan freond seman.’

65  If a thigh is broken, 12 shillings shall be paid as compensation.
65.1 If he becomes lame, friends may meet to settle the matter.

Alfred [Af 1], Gesetze, I, pp. 46-48.

1  ‘Æt ærestan we lærað, þæt mæst ðærf is, þæt æghwelc mon his að 7 his wed warlice healde.
1.1 Gif hwa to hwæðrum þissa genied sie on woh, oððe to hlafordsearwe oððe to ængum unryhtum fultume, þæt is þonne ryhtre to aleoganne þonne to gelæstanne.’
1.2 ‘Gif he þonne þæs weddige þe him riht sie to gelæstanne 7 þæt aleoge,

1.8 Gif þær ðonne oþer mennisc borg sie, bete þone borgbryce swa him ryht wisie, 7 ðone wedbryce swa him his scrift scrife.’

1 In the first place we enjoin you, just as it is most needed, that every man shall abide carefully by his oath and pledge.

1.1 If anyone is wrongfully constrained to promise either of these: to betray his lord or to render aid in an unlawful undertaking, then it is better to be false [to the promise] than to perform it.

1.2 If, however, he pledges himself to something which it is lawful to carry out and proves false to his pledge, he shall humbly give his weapons and possessions to his friends to be kept, and remain 40 days in prison at a royal manor, and undergo there whatever [sentence] the bishop prescribes for him; and his relatives shall feed him if he himself has no food.

1.3 If he has no relatives, or [if he] has no food, the king’s reeve shall feed him.

1.4 If he will not submit unless force is used against him, [i.e.] if he has to be bound, he shall forfeit his weapons and his property.

1.5 If he is slain, no wergild shall be paid for him.

1.6 If he runs away before the term [of imprisonment is completed] and is recaptured, he shall remain in prison 40 days, as he ought to have done at first.

1.7 If he escapes, he shall be banished, and excommunicated from all the churches of Christ.

1.8 If, however, other men stand surety for him, he shall pay the compensation [due to them], as the law directs him, and the compensation for breach of pledge, just as his confessor prescribes for him.

Alfred [Af 42], Gesetze, I, pp. 74-76.

42 ‘Eac we beodað: se mon se ðe his gefan hamsittendne wite, þæt he ne feohte, ær ðam he him ryhtes bidde.

42.1 Gif he mægnes hàbbe, þæt he his gefan beride 7 inne besitte, gehealde hine VII niht inne 7 hine on ne feohte, gif he inne 42.1 If he has the power to surround his adversary and besiege him, he shall keep him therein seven days without starting a fight against him if he [his adversary] will [consent to] remain inside [his residence]. And if, after seven days, he will submit and hand over his weapons, he shall keep him unscathed for thirty days, and send formal notice of his position to his kinsmen and friends.

42.2 If, however, he flees to a church, the privileges of the church shall be respected, as we have declared above.

42.3 If, however, he has not power enough to besiege him in his house, he shall ride to the ealdorman ask him for help. If he will not help him, he shall ride to the king before having recourse to violence.

42.4 And further, if anyone chances on his enemy, not having known him to be at home, and if he will give up his weapons, he shall be detained for thirty days, and his friends shall be informed [of his position]. If he is not willing to give up his weapons, then violence may be used against him. If he is willing to surrender and hand over his weapons, and anyone after that uses violence against him [the pursuer], he shall pay the sum which he incurs, whether wergild or compensation for wounds, as well as a fine, and his kinsman shall forfeit his claim to protection as a result of his action.

Also we enjoin, that a man who knows his adversary to be residing at home, shall not have recourse to violence before demanding justice of him.
42.5 We further declare that a man may fight on behalf of his lord, if his lord is attacked. Under similar conditions a lord may fight on behalf of his man.

42.6 In the same way a man may fight on behalf of his kinsman who is related to him by blood, if he is attacked unjustly, except it be against his lord. This we do not permit.

42.7 A man may recourse to fight, if he finds another [man] with his wedded wife, within closed doors or under the same blanket; or [if he finds another man] with his legitimate daughter (or sister); or with his mother, if she has been given in lawful wedlock to his father.

Edward [II Ew 3], Gesetze, I, p. 142.

3 ‘Gif hwa ðifþe betogen sy, þonne niman hine on borh ða þe hine hlaforde befaeston, þæt he hine þæs getrywsige; òððe opere frynd, gif he hæbbe, don þæt sylfe.
3.1 Gif he nyte, hwa hine on borh nime, þonne niman þa ðe hit togebyreð on his æhtan inborn.
3.2 Gif he naðor næbbe ne æhta ne oðerne borh, ðonne healde hine man to dome.’

3. If anyone is accused of theft, those who have entrusted him to the lord shall stand surety for him, so that he shall clear himself from the accusation; or if he has any other friends, they may do the same thing.

3.1 If he knows no one who will stand surety for him, those to whom it appertains may take security from his property.

3.2 If he has neither property nor any other [means of providing] security, then he shall be kept for trial.

Edward [II Ew 5], Gesetze, I, pp. 142-144.

5 ‘Gif hwa ðis oferhebbe 7 his að 7 his wæd brece, ðe eal ðeod gesead hæfð, bete swa domboc ðæce.
5.1 Gif hine donne nelle, ðolige ure ealra freonscipes* 7 ealles ðæs ðe he age.
5.2 Gif hine ða feormige syððan, bete swa seo domboc sæcge, 7 se scyle ðe ðe flyman feormige, gif hit sy herinne; gif hit sy east inne, gif hit sy norð inne, bete be ðam þe þa friðgehwritu sæcgan.’

5 If anyone neglects this and breaks his oath and his pledge, which the whole populace has given, he shall make amends as the written laws direct.

5.1 If, however, he is not willing to do so, he shall forfeit the friendship of all of us, and all that he possesses.

5.2 If anyone subsequently harbours him, he shall make amends such as the written laws declare of him who harbours a fugitive, if it [the offence] is committed herein [in this region, i.e. the area south of the Humber]; if it is committed in the eastern or northern regions [i.e. the Danelaw], amends will be made in accordance with the provisions of the treaties.

* MS B reads freodscipe; Liebermann suggest a reading as freondscipe for both occurences, see notes p. 144

Æthelstan [I As Prologue], Gesetze, I, p. 146.

N.B. Liebermann’s G is quoted over D; despite D being slightly older, G reflects an older phonology and orthography, and offers various superior readings, see Liebermann, Band III: Einleitung zu jedem Stück: Erklärungen zu einzelnen Stellen (1916), pp. 96-97.

‘Ic Æthelstan cyng, mid geþehte Wulfhelmes [mines] arcebiscopes 7 eac minra ofþerra bispoca, cype þam gerefan to gehwylcere byrig 7 eow bidde on Godes naman 7 on ealra his haligra 7 eac be minum freondscipe beode, þæt ge ærest of minum agenum gode agyfan þa teoðunga, ægþer ge on cwicum ceape ge on þæs geares eorðwæstmum, swa man rihtast mæge oððe gemetan oððe getellan oððe awegan; 7 þa bispocas þonne þæt ylce don on heora agenum gode, 7 mine ealdormen 7 mine gerefan þæt sylfe.’

I, King Æthelstan, with the advice of my Archbishop, Wulfhelm, and my other bishops also, inform the reeve in every borough, and pray you in the name of God and of all His saints, and command also by my friendship, that you render, in the first place, tithes of my own property, both in livestock and in the yearly fruits of the earth, either measuring, counting, or weighing just as one may do most accurately. And the bishops shall do the same with their own property, and my ealdormen and reeves likewise.

Æthelstan [II As 20], Gesetze, I, pp. 160-162.

20  ‘Gif hwa gemot forsitte þriwa, gilde ðæs cynges oferhynnesse; 7 hit beo seofon ær geboden, ær ðæt gemot sy.

20 And if anyone fails to attend an assembly three times, he shall pay [the fine] for insubordination to the king; and it will be announced seven nights in advance, when the meeting will be held.

20.1 If, however, he will not comply with this rule and will not pay the fine for insubordination, then the chief men who all belong to the borough shall ride [to his house] and take all that he owns, and place him under surety.

20.2 If anyone refuses to ride [on such a mission] with his companions, he shall pay [the fine] for insubordination to the king.

20.3 And it shall be proclaimed in the assembly, that one will protect everything which the king wishes to be protected, and forego theft by his life and by all they possess.

20.4 And if even then, he <this one> will not desist, all the chief men who belong to the borough shall ride there and take all he possesses —and the king shall receive half, and the men who were there on the ride [shall receive] the other half— and they shall place him under surety.

20.5 And if he knows no one who will act as surety for him, they shall arrest him.

20.6 And if he is not willing to consent thereto, they have permission to put him to death, unless he escapes.

20.7 And if anyone tries to avenge him, or will resort to violence against against any of them [who slew him], then he will be at enmity with the king and all his friends.

20.8 If he escapes and anyone harbours him, he [who does so] shall forfeit his wergild unless he taunt to clear himself by the fugitive’s wergild, that he did not know him to be a fugitive.

Æthelstan [II As 25], Gesetze, I, p. 164.

25 ‘Gif minra gerefena hwylc (þonne) þis don nylle 7 læs ymbe beo þonne we gecweden habbað, þonne gylde he mine oferhyrnesse; 7 ic finde oþere ðe wile.

APPENDIX A – FRIENDSHIP IN THE ANGLO-SAXON LAWCODES

25 If any of my reeves is not willing to carry this out, or is less inclined [to do so] than we have declared [that he should], then he shall pay the fine for insubordination to me, and I will find another [reeve] who will be willing.

25.1 And let the bishop exact this [the fine] for insubordination from the reeve, to whom it may be within his office [namely, within his diocese].

25.2 He who infringe on these ordinances shall pay 5 pund on the first occasion; on the second occasion, his wergild; and on the third occasion he shall lose all that he has and the friendship of all of us.

Æthelstan [VI As 7], Gesetze, I, p. 177.

N.B. This is the London Ordinance in the name of the London friðgegyldum, and as such not a royal ordinance.

Æthelstan [VI As 11], Gesetze, I, p. 182.

N.B. This is the London Ordinance in the name of the London friðgegyldum, and as such not a royal ordinance.

7 ‘Seofoðe, þæt we cwædon: dyde dæda se þe dyde, þ<e> ure ealra teonan wræce, þæt we wæron ealle swa on anum freondscype swa on anum feondscape, swa hwæðer hit þonne were. 7 se þe þeof fylle beforan ðœrum mannum, þæt he ware of ure ealra feo XII þæng [read þæng] þe betera for þære dæda 7 þon anginne. 7 se þe æhte þæt yrfe þe we foregildað, ne forlæte he þa æscan be ure ofherhyrmes 7 þa mynegunge þar mid, oð þæt we to þam gilde cuman; 7 se þonne eac him his geswinces geþancedon of urum gemanæn feo, be þam þe seó fare wurðe were, þy þæs seó mynugung forlæge.’

7 Seventh, we have declared, whoever it be whose actions avenge wrongs done to all of us, we shall all stand together, both in friendship and in enmity whichever it may be [of the two]. And he who kills a thief before others, shall be rewarded for his action and initiative by twelve þæng [taken] from our wealth. And he who has cattle for which we pay, will not forsake the search and the fulfilment [of our grievance] for disobedience to us, until we have obtained payment; and then we shall reward him also from our common wealth for his trouble, just as much as his journey incurred, lest the fulfilment be neglected.

7 ‘Endlyfte, þæt Æþelstan <cyng> beot his bisceopum 7 his ealdormannum 7 his gerefum eallum ofer ealne minne anweald, þæt ge þone frið swa healdan swa ic hine geraedd habbe 7 mine

11 Eleventh, Æthelstan commands his bishops and his ealdormen, and all his reeves throughout his dominions; that you shall keep the peace just as I have decided with my councillors. If any of you is negligent and unwilling to obey me, and will not exact from his followers [under his jurisdiction] the [above-mentioned] pledge; and if he permits secret gatherings, and is unwilling to attend to exercising our rules, in accordance with what I have commanded and set down in writing, it will be that the reeve shall be deprived of his office and my friendship, and he shall pay me 120 scillinga; and half this sum shall be paid by each of my thegns who is in possession of land, and is unwilling to attend to exercising our rule in accordance with my commands.

Edmund [II Em 1], Gesetze, I, pp. 186-188.

1. ‘Gif hwa heanonforð æenigne man ofslea, ðæt he wege sylf ða fæhþe, butan he hy mid freonda fylste binnan twelv monðum forgylyde be fullan were, sy swa boren swa he sy.

1. If, henceforth anyone slay a man, he is himself to bear the violence, unless he can pay compensation at the full wergild within twelve months with the aid of his friends, whatever class he [the man slain] may belong to.

1.1 If, however, the kindred abandons him, and is not willing to pay compensation for him, it is then my will that all his kindred is to be exempt from the violence, except the actual offender, if they give him neither food nor protection afterwards.

1.2 If, however, any one of his kinsmen harbours him afterwards, he is to be liable to forfeit all that he owns to the king, and to bear the violence as is [due] from the kindred [of the man slain], because they previously abandoned him.
1.3 If, however, any one of the other kindred recourses to vengeance on any man other than the actual wrongdoer, he is to incur the hostility of the king and all his friends, and to forfeit all that he owns.

Edmund [III Em 2], Gesetze, I, p. 190.

2 ‘Uult etiam, ut ubi fur pro certo cognoscetur, twelfhindi et twihindi conscientur et exuperent eum uiium uel mortuum, alterutrum quod poeterunt; et qui aliquem eorum infaidiabit qui in ea quaestione fuerint, sit inimicus regis et omnium amicorum eius; et si quis negauerit et coadiuare nolit, emendet regi cxx s. – uel secundum hoc perneget quod nesciuit – et hundreto xxx s.’

2 Further, it is his will, that where a man is proved to be a thief, the twelvehundreds* and twohundreds* shall unite and seize him, alive or dead, whichever they can; and he, who will recourse to violence against any of those who have been concerned in that pursuit, will become an enemy of the king and of all his friends, and if anyone shall refuse to come forward and does not want to help, he shall pay 120 shillings to the king – or will [formally] deny knowledge of this [i.e. the affair] accordingly, because he did not know – and 30 shillings to the hundred.

* indicates wergilds; so men of high wergild, and men of low wergild

Edgar [IV Eg 1.5-1.5a], Gesetze, I, p. 208.

N.B. The added clause 1.5a is suggested to be dating from Æthelred’s reign, and is closely associated with Worcester traditions, see Liebermann, Gesetze, III, p. 140; Wormald, The Making of English Law, p. 317.

1.5 ‘Þonne beode ic minum gerefan, be minum freondscipe 7 be callum þam þe hy agon, þæt hy styran ælcum para þe þis ne gelæeste 7 minra witenæ weð abrecan mid ænegum wacscipe wille, swa swa him seo foresæde geradnes tece; 7 on þære steore ne sy nan forgifnes.

1.5a Gif he swa earm bið, þæt he aðer deð oððe þa Godes wanað, his saula to forwyrdre, oððe waccor mid modes graman hy behwyrð þonne þæt he him to agenum teleð, þonne him micle agenre is, þæt him æfre on ecnysse gelæst, gif he hit mid unnan 7 mid fulre blisse don wolde.

1.5 Further, I enjoin upon my reeves, on pain of forfeiting my friendship and all they possess, to correct anyone who neglect these things and who renounces the declaration of my councillors by any remissness on his part, just as foresaid ordinance set out for them; and there shall be no remission of the correction.
1.5a If he is so debased as either to curtail what is due to God, corrupting his soul, or, with angry heart, to attend to it less diligently than to what he accounts his own, [he ought to realise that] those things will be much more his own, what last for him to all eternity, if he would have been willing to grant it [i.e. collected church taxes] with full [intention? dedication?] and with benevolence.

Æthelred [II Atr 9], Gesetze, I, p. 226.

N.B. These clauses are not part of the peace agreement, but instead form an appendix to it, dating c. 950-1000, with strong Æthelredian overtones. For a discussion, see Liebermann, Gesetze, III, pp. 149, 154-155.

9 Formerly it was ruled that one should vouch to warranty for the first three times at the place where it [i.e. the property] was first taken, and every subsequent time, at he place where the man would declare it [to be]. Then the authorities decided that it would be better that one would always vouch to warranty where it was first taken, just as long that one should know where it [i.e. the process] would end, lest a man of small means should be burdened by long and distant journeys in order to recover his property. The burden should rather be borne by him who holds property to which he is not entitled, than by him who is putting forward a just claim to it.
9.1 Likewise, he who attaches his goods shall see to it that he has trustworthy security in every case of vouching to warranty, and shall beware of attaching wrongly, lest the burden, which he had thought should be borne by the other man, should be laid upon him.

9.2 If anyone vouches a dead person to warranty – unless he has an heir who can clear it [i.e. the charge] - he who vouches him to warranty shall show by means of witnesses, if he can, that he is acting justly; and by means of them he shall clear himself. Then the dead man will be held guilty, unless he has friends who will clear him according to the law, as he himself would have been obliged to do, if he had been able or alive.

9.3 If, however, he has friends who are prepared to do so, the vouching to warranty shall fail as completely as if he had himself been alive and had proved his denial. Then he, in whose possession it [the property] is, will be held guilty of theft, because denial is always stronger than accusation.

9.4 Further, in the process of vouching to warranty, if anyone accepts and does not carry the process any further but desires to declare himself the owner [of the property], no-one can deny his claim, if trustworthy witnesses establish his ownership of the property, because in principle the actual possessor must be regarded as having more rights than the claimant.

Æthelred [IV Atr 4], Gesetze, I, p. 234.

4 ‘Et diximus: homo qui hamsocnam faciet intra portum sine licentia et summam infracturam aget de placito ungebendo, uel qui aliquem innocentem affliget in uia regia, si iaceat, iaceat in ungildan ækere.

4.1 Si pugnet, antequam sibi rectum postulet, ac uiuat, emendet regis burhbrece quinque libris.

4.2 Si curet amicitiam ipsius porti, reddat nobis triginta sol. emendationis, si rex hoc concedat nobis.’

4 And we have decreed that a man who, within the town, makes forcible entry into another man’s house without permission and commits a breach of the peace of the worse kind, or he who assaults an innocent person on the king’s highway, if he is slain, shall lie in an unhonoured grave.

4.1 If he will recourse to violence, before demanding justice for himself, but stays alive thereby, he shall pay 5 pounds for breach of the king’s peace.

4.2 If he values the friendship of the town itself, he shall pay us 30 shillings as compensation, if the king will condone this to us.
II. WULFSTANIAN CODES

Edward and Gudrum’s Treaty [EGu Prologue], Gesetze, I, p. 128.

N.B. Dorothy Whitelock has dated this agreement to Æthelred’s reign, and Simon Keynes has suggested treating the settlement as Wulfstan’s first legal contribution to Æthelred’s law-giving tradition, dating the treaty to the period between 1002 and 1008; see, Whitelock, ‘Wulfstan and the So-Called Laws of Edward and Guthrum’, pp.17-18; Keynes, ‘An Abbot, An Archbishop and the Viking Raids of 1006-7 and 1009-12’, p. 177.

‘And þis is seo gerædnis eac, þe Ælfred cyng 7 Guðrum cyng 7 eft Eadward cyng (7 Guðrum cyng) gecuran 7 gecwædon, þa þa Engle 7 Dene to friþe 7 to freondscipe fullice fengon; 7 þa witan eac, þe syððan væron, oft 7 unseldan þæt seolfe geniwodon 7 mid gode gehihtan.’

This also is the proclamation which King Alfred and King Guthrum and afterwards King Edward (and King Guthrum) enacted and agreed upon, when the English and the Danes unreservedly entered into peace and friendship; the councilors likewise, who have been [in office] since then, often and frequently have repeated the same and have supported it with [further] improvement.

Æthelred [V Atr 1], Gesetze, I, pp. 236-238.

1 ‘Dæt is þonne ærest, þæt we ealle ænne God lufian 7 weorðian 7 ænne Cristendom georne healdan 7 ælce hæðendum mid ealle aweorpan; 7 þæt we habbað ealle ægþer ge mid worde ge mid wedde gefæstnod, þæt we under anum cynedome ænne Cristendom healdan willað.

1.1 7 ures hlafordes gerædnes 7 his witena is, þæt man rihte laga up ærere 7 ælce unlaga georne afyle, 7 þæt man læte beon æghwylcne man rihtes wyrpe,

1.2 7 þæt man frið 7 freondscype rihtlice healde innan þysan earde for Gode 7 for worolde.’

1 This is the first [provision], that we all shall love and honour one God and zealously hold one Christian faith and entirely cast off every heathen practice; and we all have confirmed both with word and with pledge that we will hold one Christian faith under the rule of one king.

1.1 And it is the decree of our lord and his councillors that just practices be established and that all illegal practices be readily abolished, and let it be that every man is allowed the benefit of law; and that peace and friendship are to be rightly maintained within this land in religious and secular matters.

Æthelred [V Atr 31], Gesetze, I, p. 244.

31 ‘7 gyf hwa forsteal oððon openne wiþercwyde ongean lahariht Christes oððe cyninges ahwar gewyrce, gylde swa wer swa wite swa lahslite, aa be ðam þe seo dæd sy.

31.1 7 gyf he ongean riht þurh æhlyp geonbyrde & swa gewyrce, þæt hine man afyle, liege ægylde eallan his freondan.’

31 And if anyone commits obstruction or open resistance anywhere against the law of Christ or of the king, he is to pay either wergild or fine or lahslit, ever in proportion to the deed.

31.1 And if he against the law offers resistance with a transgression, and so brings it about that he is killed, no wergild is paid to any of his friends.

Æthelred [VI Atr 6], Gesetze, I, p. 248.

6 ‘7 la gyf we willað biddan freonda gehwylcne 7 eal folc eac læran georne, þæt hy inwerdre heortan ænne God lufian 7 ælcne hæþendom georne ascunian.’

6 And now behold, we will beseech all our friends and likewise earnestly enjoin upon the whole nation, to love one God from their inmost heart, and zealously shun all heathen practices.

Æthelred [VI Atr 8], Gesetze, I, p. 250.

8 ‘7 witenæ gerednes is, þæt man rihte laga up arære for Gode 7 for worolde 7 ælghwilce unlaga georne afyle,

8.1 7 þæt man heonan forð læte manna gehwylcne, ge earmne ge eadigne, folcrihtes wyrðe,

8.2 7 þæt man frið 7 freondscape rihtlice healde innan þysan earde for Gode and for weorolde.’

8 And the decree of the councillors is, that justice shall be promoted in religious and secular matters, and all injustice zealously overturned;

8.1 and that henceforth all men, both poor and prosperous, shall be allowed the benefit of the law;

8.2 and that peace and friendship shall be rightly maintained within this land in religious and secular matters.
Æthelred [VI Atr 28], Gesetze, I, p. 254.

28  ‘7 word 7 weorc freonda gehwilc fadige mid rihte 7 að 7 wedd værliche healde.
28.1 7 æghwilc unriht aweorpe man georne of þysan earde, þæs þe man don mæge.

28.3 7 deoflice dæda on morðweorcum 7 on manslihtan, on stalan 7 on strudungan, on gitsungan 7 on giffernessan, on oferfyllan 7 on ofermettan 7 on mistlican lahbrican, on æwbrican 7 on hadbrican, on freolsbricon 7 on fæstenbricon, on cyricrenan 7 on meniges cynnes misdædan.’

28  And let each one of our friends guide his words and deeds correctly, and strictly observe his oath and pledge.
28.1  And let him zealously cast out every injustice from this land, as far as it is possible to do so.
28.2  And let him strictly eschew deceitful deeds and hateful injustices, that is, false weights, and erroneous measures, and dishonest testimonies, and shameful deceits, and foul adulteries, and horrible perjuries,
28.3  and devilish deeds such as murders and manslaughters, thefts and robberies, covetousness and greed, arrogance and gluttony, deceptions and various breaches of the law, violations of marriage and of holy orders, breaches of festivals and of fasts, sacrilege, and misdeeds of many kinds.

Æthelred [VI Atr 42], Gesetze, I, pp. 256-258.

42  ‘Eac we [gyt] willað myngian [georne] freonda gehwilcne, ealswa us neod is gelome to donne, þæt gehwa hine sylfne georne bepence, 42.1 7 þæt he fram synnan georne gecyrre 7 oprum mannnum unrihtes styre.
42.2 7 þæt he oft 7 gelome hæbbe on gemynde, þæt mannnum is mæst þearf oftost to gemunene, þæt is þæt hy rihtne geleafan anrædlice habban on þone sopan God, þæs þe is wealdend 7 wyrhta eala gesceafhta. 7 þæt hy rihtne Christendom rihtlice healdan 7 þæt hy godcundan lareawan geornlice hyran 7 Godes larum 7 lagum geornlice fylgean.
42.3 7 þæt hy Godes cyrican æghwar georne griðian 7 friðian 7 mid leohete 7 lacum hi gelome gegretan, 7 hy sylfhe þær georne to Christie gebiddan.’
And likewise we desire [earnestly] to remind each one of our friends, as there is need for us to do frequently, that each diligently thinks about this for themselves,

And that they eagerly will turn from sins and will restrain other men from wrong-doing, and that they will frequently and often have in mind what is of supreme importance for men to remember, that is, that they unanimously should have a right belief in the true God, who is the ruler and maker of all created things.

And that they should duly keep the true Christian faith, and diligently listen to their spiritual teachers, and zealously follow God’s laws and rules.

And that they should diligently protect and defend the churches of God everywhere, and frequently visit them with candles and offerings, and there themselves earnestly pray to Christ.

Æthelred [X Atr 2], Gesetze, I, p. 270.

2 ‘7 witena gerædnes is, þæt man rihte laga upp arære 7 ælce unlaga georne afylle, 7 þæt man læte beon æghwylcne man rihtes wyrðe.

2.1 7 þæt man frið 7 freondscype rihtlice healde for Gode 7 for worolde.’

2 And the decree of the councillors is, that justice be promoted and every injustice zealously suppressed, and that every man be allowed the benefit of the law.

2.1 And that peace and friendship be duly maintained in religious and secular matters.

Æthelred [VIII Atr 22], Gesetze, I, p. 266.

22 ‘Gif man freondleasne weofodþen mid tihtlan belecge, þe adfultum næbbe, ga to corsnaede, 7 þær þonne æt gefare þæt þæt God wille, buton he on husle ladian mote.

22 If a friendless minister of the altar is accused with charges, and if he has no oath-helpers, he is to go to the corsnaed [=type of ordeal that involves swallowing the host], and then experience there next what God wishes, unless he is allowed to clear himself on the host.’

Æthelred [VIII Atr 27], Gesetze, I, p. 266.

27 ‘Gif mæssepreost ahwar stande on leasre gewitnesse oððe on menan aðe oððe þeofa gewita 7 geweorhta beo, þonne sy he aworpen of gehadodra gemanan 7 polige ægðer ge geferscipes ge freondscipes ge æghwilces wurðscipes, buton he wið God 7 wið men þe deoplicor gebete, fullice swa biscop him tæce, 7 him borh finde, þæt he þanan forð æfre swilces geswice.

27.1 And gif he ladian wille, geladige be dæde mæðe swa mid þryfealdre lade, be þam þe seò dæd sy.’

27 If a priest anywhere stands in false witness or perjury, or be the accessory and accomplice of thieves, he shall be cast out from the fellowship of those in holy orders, and shall forfeit both their fellowship and their friendship and every kind of honour, unless he will make thorough amends towards God and men, completely, as the bishop shall prescribe for him, and find surety that henceforth he will cease for ever from all such [wrong-doing].

27.1 And if he seeks to clear himself, he shall do is in proportion to the deed, just so with a threefold method of proof, in accordance with the nature of the deed.

Æthelstan [VIII Atr 44], Gesetze, I, p. 268.

44 ‘And uton rihtne Cristendom geornlice wurðian 7 ælcne hæðendom mid ealle oferhogian.

44.1 And uton ænne cynehlaford holdlice healdan; 7 freonda gehwic mid rihtan getriwðan oðerne lufige 7 healde mid rihte.’

44 And let us zealously honour the true Christian faith and utterly despise heathen practices.

44.1 And let us loyally support one royal lord, and let each of our friends love the other with true fidelity and support him duly.

A. Friendship in proems

S 595

_ECEE_, 6, pp. 159-160.

A.D. 956. King Eadwig to Ælfwine, his faithful minister and miles; grant of 10 hides (mansae) at Yaxley and 5 at Farcet, Hunts. Archive: Thorney.

‘Regnante ac gubernante domino nostro Jhesu Christo. Memoria igitur hominum cito elabitur, ideo studendum est omnibus perseuerantibus et manentibus in hoc presenti seculo ut certis litterarum apicibus notentur que deuotis mentibus notis ac fidelibus amicis ad corporee necessitatis iuuamina largiuntur.’

Our Lord Jesus Christ will reign and rule in perpetuity. As memory of men swiftly elapses, therefore it is desired that they are recorded for those who persevere and remain in this present world through the durable letters of records, which are enlarged by devoted, acquainted minds and trustworthy friends towards the aid of corporal need.

A.D. 940. King Edmund to Eadric, minister; lease, for four lives, of 4 hides (mansae) at Wotton-under-Edge, Gloucs. Archive: Winchester, Old Minster.

‘In nomine altithroni qui omnia de summo cæli apice visibilia et invisibilia ordinabiliter gubernans atque moderans. presentisque vitae curriculo cotidie temporalis gaze possessiones et universe divitiarum facultates quas predecessorum anxia sollicitudo per indefessa laborum emolumenta lucratur; et incertis heredibus interdum optatis interdum alienis reliquuntur. Sic mutando fragilitas mortalis vite marcescit; et rotunda seculorum volubilitas inanescit; ac in carorum propinquorum amicorumque amissione conqueritur ac lacrimatur.’

In name of him, who is enthroned in heaven, directing and governing all visible and invisible events in orderly manners from the highest summit of heaven. And the anxious solicitude gains daily in the course of the present and temporal the possession of treasures and the universal faculties of riches life by the indefatigable benefits of labours; and they are left behind, sometimes to uncertain (unreliable?) heirs, sometimes to other hopeful outsiders. So frailty of a mortal life withers by changing events; and the whirling of worldly affairs begins to become empty by rotating; and it laments and weeps over the loss of beloved relatives and friends.

A.D. 943. King Edmund to Eadric, minister; grant of 10 hides at Leckhampstead, and a mill on the river Lambourn, Berks. Archive: Abingdon.

‘In nomine Dei summi et altitroni qui omnia de summo celi apice visibilium et invisibilium ordinabiliatar gubernans atque moderans, presentisque uite curriculo cotidie temporales possessiones et uniuerse diuitiarum facultates nostris humanis obtutibus cernimus deficientes et decrescentes. Sic mutando fragilitas mortalis uite marcescit et rotunda seculorum uolubilitas inanescit ac in carorum propinquorum amicorumque amissione conqueritur ac defletur.’

In name of God almighty who is enthroned in heaven, directing and governing all visible and invisible events in orderly manner from the highest summit of heaven, in the course of the present life we daily separate temporary possessions and the universal faculties of riches with our human contemplations as being faltering and decreasing; So the frailty of a mortal life withers by changing events; and the whirling of worldly affairs begins to become empty by rotating; and it laments and weeps over the loss of beloved relatives and friends.

In the name of God Almighty and the most exalted Jesus Christ. It is manifest to the rest that all divine and earthly events are directed by the providence of God, in the face of which the solitude of a mortal life laments and weeps to all pressures for the loss of beloved ones and friends. Therefore the honeysweet prophecy of the divine calling urges us with certain affirmations to frequent prayers, so that they will continually arrive at the everlasting kingdoms of God for judgment with these fugitives and without doubt with their little transitory possessions. Therefore it will be investigated by all wise men, because the fine meditation of man recedes from memory, (that is) words or deeds, by the complex commotion in diverse matters of distressful worldly events, lest they are spared by the durable letters of records and by a precaution for protection and (lest they) are recalled to commemoration by frequent reminders. For this reason, it happens to befall that as the result of remaining negligence, it (=memory) may modify the right claim of the possessor in favour of another family by the blackening of clouds.

B. Dispositive section

Shaftesbury, 12, pp. 47-50.
A.D. 941. King Edmund to Eadric, his vassallus; grant of 2 hides at Beechingstoke, Wilts. Archive: Shaftesbury.

‘Ideo ego Admundus, ex regali progenie Deo annuente regenteque super Angligenas aliasque multas gentes in circuitu habitantes rex ordinatus, amabili uassallo meo Adrico fidelique amico duas terre mansas in perpetuam dono hereditatem, quatinus, temporalium rerum mobili presencia utens, fidelem obedienciam ac pacem laudabilem erga regni ceptra nostri et regale nostrum solium eternabiliter impetret et benigniter seruet.’

Therefore, I, Edmund, from royal stock, designated and guided by God, ordained king over the Angles and many other peoples living in the surroundings, give to my beloved follower and loyal friend Eadric two hides in perpetual possession, using the changing presents of temporary affairs, for as long as he obtains his loyal obedience and the praiseworthy peace towards our royal sceptre and our royal throne and serves benignly.

Bath and Wells, 7, pp. 86-89.
A.D. 946. King Edmund to Æthelhere, his faithful minister; grant of 5 hides at Weston near Bath, Somerset, on condition that he and his heirs remain faithful to Edmund until the king’s death and thereafter transfer their loyalty to a designated friend (amicus) of the king. Archive: Bath.

‘Quam ob rem ego Eadmundus, desiderio regni celestis exardens, fauente superno numine basyleos Anglorum multarumque gentium in circuitu persistentium, cuidam adoptiuo fidei meo ministro nomine Æþelere, ob illius amabile obsequium ei libenter largiendo quinque manzas ibidem ubi uulgares prisco more mobilique relatione uocitant æt Westtune, eatenus ut uita comite tam fidus mente quam subditus operibus mihi placabile obsequium prebeat. Et meum post obitum cuicunque meorum amicorum uoluero eadem fidelitate immobils obediensque fiat.’

For this reason, I, Edmund, burning with desire for the heavenly king, by the heavenly will ruler of the Angles and of many peoples which stand around, have given to my adopted and loyal thegn by the name of Æthelhere, for his loveable obedience five, at that place which the common people by ancient use and in changing reply call ‘at Westtune’ as long as he, loyal, during his committed life (life in office?) demonstrates to me a pleasing obedience, as much loyal in mind, as subordinate in deeds. And after my death, I would desire him to demonstrate to anyone of my friends that same steadfast loyalty, when it (my death) comes to happen, while he is being obedient.

A.D. 966. King Edgar to New Minster, Winchester; refoundation and grant of privileges. Archive: Winchester, New Minster.

‘VIII. Hac itaque ratione Sancti Spiritus actactus flamine locum Domini mundans Wintaniensis eclesiae noui monasterii arcisterium nostro salvatori eiusque genitrici semper uirgini Mariae et omnibus apostolis cum caeteris sanctis dicatum restauraui. ‘For this reason therefore, having been touched by the spirit of the Holy Ghost, cleansing the Lord’s abode, I have re-established the monastery of the New Minster of the church of Winchester, dedicated to Our Saviour and His mother Mary, the Perpetual Virgin, and to all the Apostles, with other saints. Being acquainted with the writing, whose who consent to things and those who do them are equally fettered in punishment, not supporting rebels who oppose the will of the Almighty in usurping the Lord’s property, I have driven away the wanton clerks, and I, subject to the high-throned One, choosing an abbot with Christ’s help, have faithfully appointed thither true worshippers of God, observing the monkish decree [of humility], who might intercede for our sins, and for those of our people lying at rest there, by zealous service, [so that], fortified by their intercessions, the condition of our kingdom might thrive. Humbly requesting this, I beseech that what I have done for His people, He do for those collected together by Himself under me, namely that, in casting down our enemies, He should elevate our friends with advancement, just as I, suppressing the enemies of the Holy Church of God, have blessedly advanced His friends, namely the monks.’

Kemble, 3, no. 652, p. 218.
A.D. 985. King Æthelred to Alfred, his amicus; grant of 11 hides (mansae) at Michelmersh, Hants. Archive: Winchester, Old Minster.

‘Quamobrem ego Æðelredus rex Anglorum praenoscens quorum praedicta tendant, scilicet ad diligendos homines bonis moribus adornatos, concedo cuidam meo amico fideli nomine Ælferd quondam telluris particulam, id est .xi. mansas in loco vulgari uocitamine æt Mclamersce, quatinus uita comite habeat ac perenniter possideat; cum autem interitum communem aduenire cognouerit, cuicunque sibi libuerit haeredi post se commendet in propriam haereditatem.’

In account of which, I, Æthelred, king of the English, foreknowing where foresaid things extended to, namely to esteemed men adorned with good morals, grant to one of my loyal friends by the name Alfred a particular piece of land, that is, eleven hides at the place which is by common name known as ‘at Mclamersce’, for as long as he has it for a committed life and may he possess it many years; when, moreover, he will have known to come to a common/public (as the result of his office?) death, it will be free to him to entrust it to any of his heirs in proper possession after him.

Abingdon 2, 125, pp. 483-486.
A.D. 995. King Æthelred to Æthelwig, his miles; grant of 5 hides at Ardley, Oxon., forfeited by three brothers. Archive: Abingdon.

‘Unde ego Æthelred gratia Dei Anglorum rex cunctis meis uolo notum adesse fidelibus, quod ego iure hereditario cuidam meo militi nomine Æthelwig quinque trado mansos in uilla que a notis uocatur Eardulfes lea, ut uita comite eos possideat et postquam dies extremus eius clauserit oculos cuicumque amico uoluerit in perpetuam derelinquat possessionem.’

From where, I, Æthelred by the grace of God king of the English wish it to appear known with all my loyal followers, that I give five hides at the estate which is known as ‘Eardulf’s lea’ in hereditary right to my thegn by the name Æthelwig, so that he may possess these lands for his committed life and in perpetual possession and after his last days will close his eyes, he may bequeath it to any of his friends he wishes.

Sherborne, 15, pp. 51-53.
A.D. 1014. King Æthelred to Sherborne Abbey; grant of 13 or 16 hides at Corscombe, Dorset. The estate had belonged to Sherborne in Edgar’s reign, been leased out for two lives and then sold to Ealdorman Eadric, and later bought back by Wulfgar, famulus of Sherborne. Archive: Sherborne.

‘quondam Alfwoldus episcopus rege EADGARO consentiente duorum hominum tempus de ipso monasterio accommodauit. sed sequens post illorum uite terminationem successor Æthelricus uocamine episcopus recte redintegrauit. necessitudineque postea cogente. ob malorum infestationes direptionesque Danorum duci Eadrico tradizione perpetuali tribuit. Labentibus denique annorum curriculis; quidam predicti monasterii famulus nomine Wlfgarus. fauente amicorum amminiculo. multo auri argentique pretio. illam terram ab ipso comparauit Eadrico. atque pro anime sue remedio - supra memorato concessit cenobio.’

Once, Bishop Ælfwold had leased it (=13 or 16 hides at Corscombe) with King Edgar’s approval from the same monastery for the time of two men (‘s life). But afterwards, following the end of the life of the two men, his successor named Bishop Æthelric justly reclaimed it. Afterwards, compelled by necessity, as the result of infestations of bad men and the looting by Danes, he granted it to ealdorman Eadric in perpetual hold. And then the course of many years slipped by; until a certain attendant of foresaid monastery by the name Wulfgar bought this land from Eadric himself, supported by the favour of his friends, for a price of a lot of gold and silver, and he granted it to the monastery formerly recounted for the remedy of his soul.

Abingdon 2, 129, pp. 503-505.

A.D. 990 x 1006, perhaps 999. King Æthelred to St Mary’s, Abingdon; grant of land at Farnborough and Wormleighton, Warwicks., and South Cerney, Gloucs. [seized by Ælfric, dux, from a widow, Eadflæd, forfeited by him and restored to Eadflæd, and bequeathed by Eadflæd to King Æthelred]; and at Pyrian (? Wood- or Waterperry, Oxon.) [given to King Æthelred by Æthelweard, son of Ceolflæd], in compensation for the loss of land at Hurstbourne, Hants., and at Bedwyn and Burbage, Wilts. [granted to Abingdon by King Edgar and confiscated by King Edward the Martyr].

Archive: Abingdon.

‘Tellurem uero ad Pyrian, quam etiam ad ide premfatum concedo monasterium, unam illarum constat esse terrarum quas Adelward Ceolflede filius mihi eternaliter possidendas pro mea donauit amicitia. Omni uulgo longe lateque satis est cognitum qualiter ipse contra me rei extiterint, qualiterque ambo meam inimicitiam exigitibus suis reatibus incurrerint. Hec prefatarum descriptio terrarum facta est per admonitionem Ordulfi auunculi mei et Aþelmari consanguinitate mihi conglutinati et Wlfgeati ministri mei dilecti necnon et abbatis mei Wlfgari tota mihi deuotione benigni, qui me frequenti suggestione cum ceterorum fidelium communuit suasione quatinus Dei omnipotentis hereditatem ex aliqua parte innouare et augere curarem. Quod et feci propter Christi qui me in regno sublimauit amorem et eorum qui me amica assiduitate ad meam exhortantur necessariam et eternam salutem et propter humilem et benignam quam mihi prefatus abba fideliter et gratanter exhibere solet obedientiam.’

The land, namely at ‘Pyrian’, which I have parted with to the benefit of the same foresaid monastery, as it is well-known to be one of those lands which Æthelward, son of Ceolflæd, gave to me to be held perpetually for my friendship. It is fitting to know for all people far and wide what kind of case he and his brother raised against me, just as how they both incurred my enmity by their examined charges. This description of the mentioned lands was made at the admonition of my uncle Ordulf and of Æthelmaer, who is bound to me by kinship, and by the thegn Wulfgeat beloved to me, and also by my abbot, Wulfgar, with complete devotion kind to me, who reminded me by frequent suggestion with the loyal followers of the others to the need to what extent I had to undertake this, (that is) to restore and to increase the inheritance of God Almighty from some part, just as I did. I have also done that on account of the love for Christ, who raised me to power, and on account of those who encourage me with friendly assiduity towards my necessity and eternal health; and on account of the humble and kind obedience which the aforementioned abbot is accustomed to present loyally and joyfully to me.

‘et primo anno regiæ dignitatis. Eadwi. quo sceptra rexit regalia. Constat etiam hic codicellus magna auctoritate catholicorum sic titulatus. Beatus agonista totius Britannie Eadwi en imperat obsecrando et obsecrat imperando per munus euuangelicæ auctoritatis ut nullus fraudulenter hoc ejus donum audeat violare; ne penas luat mortis amare. Sed unusquisque qui animæ suæ amicus et custos velit esse; huic donationi sue studeat augmentando et servando prodesse; ut gaudiis civium cælestium valeat interesse.’

Also in the first year of the royal dignity, (In the name of) Eadwig, by whom the royal sceptre it managed. It is fit namely that this codicil with great authority of all universal things agrees him to be accordingly titled. Blessed warrior of all of England, Eadwig, behold, rules by beseeching and beseeches by ruling through the gift of evangelical authority so that no one may dare to fraudulently violate this gift by him; he may pay the penalty of a bitter death. However, anyone who desires to be a friend and guardian of his soul; let this one strive to be useful for his gift by augmenting and serving; so that he may succeed to partake in the joys of the heavenly citizens.

New Minster, 22, pp. 90-93.

A.D. 959. King Eadwig to New Minster, Winchester; grant of 10 hides at Bighton, Hants., with lease, for life, by the Minster to Ælfric, the king’s minister, in return for 60 mancuses of gold. Archive: Winchester, New Minster.

‘Nos igitur supradicti sancti Petri monasterii cenobite cum regis consensu suorumque heroicorum necnon nostro communi consilio, hanc supradictam terram cuidam regis ministro uocitato nomine Aelfrico, pro petitione amicorum suorum atque eius placabili munere quod cum humili deuocione nobis largitus est, id est .lx. mancusas auri, diebus uite sue libenter concedimus eo tenore, ut cum dissolutionis sue dies aduenerit non cuiquam sue prosapie soboli derelinquat, sed sine aliquo obstaculo cum omnibus utensilibus, hominibus, ouibus pecoribusque, monasterio sancti Petri sicut supradictam est diligenter restituat.’

We of foresaid monastery of St Peter have thus freely granted this for the days of his life with the consent of the king and his heirs and also with the advice of our community, this foresaid land to a certain thegn of the king by the name Ælfric, according to the petition of his friends and for his pleasing gift, which with humble devotion is given to us, that is, sixty mancuses of gold, for this course (office?), so that when the day of his dissolution arrives it will not to be left behind for any of his family of offspring, but it will be returned, without any obstacle, with all that is useful, men, birds, and sheep, to the monastery of St Peter just diligently said above.

Quotations of wills containing friendship vocabulary

All quotations are taken from the most recent edition, if available, from the British Academy series. For convenience, Sawyer numbers have been provided. Translations are taken from the available translations by Dorothy Whitelock (Wills) A. J. Robertson (Charters (R)), and F. E. Harmer (SEHD). References to translations have been presented in brackets.

1. King

King Alfred (S 1507)

New Minster, 1, pp. 3-7 (SEHD, 11, pp. 49-53).

A.D. 873 x 888. Will of King Alfred. Archive: Winchester, New Minster.

‘7 ic wylle þæt man agyfe þam hiwum æt Domrahamme hyra landbec 7 hyra freols swylce hand to ceosenne swylce him leofast sy, for me 7 for Ælflæde 7 for þa frynd þe heo foreþingode 7 ic foreþingie.’

And I want that the community at Damerham will receive their landbook and that they will freely choose a lord which is most dear to them, for me and for Ælfflæd and for the friends for whom I interceded and intercede.

The vocabulary in this passage is very close to an earlier passage of the will in which Alfred made provisions for several religious houses:

‘Eac swa gedæle for me 7 for minne fæder 7 for þa frynd þe he foreþingode. 7 ic foreþingie twa hund punda fiftig mæssepreostum ofer eall min rice, fiftig earmum Godes þeowum, fiftig earmum þearfum, fiftig to þære cyrican þe ic æt reste.’

I also grant two hundred pounds for me and for my father and for the friends for whom he interceded and I intercede: fifty mass-priests throughout my kingdom, fifty for the poor servants of God, fifty for the poor destitutes, fifty to the church in which I will lay.
2. BISHOP

Ælfsige, bishop of Winchester (S 1491)

New Minster, 18, pp. 84-86 (Wills, 4, pp. 16-17).

A.D. 955 x 958. Will of Ælfsige, bishop (of Winchester). Archive: Winchester, New Minster.

‘Þonne bidde ic minnan leofan freond Ælfheah þæt þu bewite ægþer ge þa land ge þa þe mine magas sien, 7 þ[æt] þu ne geþafige þæt man þis on ænig oþer wænde.’

Then I pray you, my dear friend Ælfheah, that [you] will watch both over the estates and over those who are my kinsmen, and that you will never permit anyone to alter this in any way.

3. FEMALE BENEFACTORS

Cynethryth (S 1200)

SEHD, 7, pp. 10-11 (p. 45).

‘Donne hebfað Eadwald 7 Cyne ðas wisan ðus fundene mid hira friandum. Gib Eadweald leng lïfïge donne Cyneðryð geselle et ðem londe et Cert .x. ðusendra Gif he gewite er donne hia his barna sue hwelc sue lifes sie ægefe ðet feoh oniatee sue hit soelest sie forða hit begetan Nis Æðelmode enig meghond neor ðes cynnes ðanne Eadwald his modar his broðar dohtar Mest cyn ðet he ðet lond hebbe 7 his beorn yfter him 7 sue ateon sue him nytlicas＜t＞ ðynce for ða ðe hit mid reohte begetan.’

Now Eadweald and Cynethryth have devised the following arrangements with the help of their friends: If Eadweald lives longer than Cynethryth, he is to give for the estate at Chart ten thousand. If he dies first, whichever of his children is alive is to pay the money and dispose of it as may be best for those who acquired it. There is not any relative of Æthelmod as near of kin as Eadweald, whose mother [was] his brother’s daughter. It is most proper that he should have the land, and his children after him, and so disposes of it as may seem most useful for those who have legally obtained it.

Æthelgifu (S 1497)

Æthelgifu declares her wish to her royal lord and to her lady and to her friends, what she wishes to render to God, what to her lord and what to her friends.

Wulfgyth (S 1535)
Wills, 32, pp. 84-87.
A.D. 1042 x 1053, possibly 1046. Will of Wulfgyth. Archive: Canterbury, Christ Church.

‘And ic yan þet land at Stistede. a Godes ywittnesse. and mine vrenden. into Xp’es chereche. þa muneken. to vostre. on þan yrede þet Elfkitel. and Kytel mine bea’r’n. bruke þas londes. hyre dey.’

And I grant the estate at Stisted, with the witness of God and my friends, to Christchurch for the sustenance of the monks in the community, on condition that my sons Ælfketel and Ketel may have the use of the estate for their lifetime.

Ælfflæd (S 1486)
Wills, 15, pp. 38-43.
A.D. 1000 x 1002. Will of Ælfflæd. Archive: Bury St Edmunds.

‘7 ic gean Æðelm[æ]re æaldorman þes landes æt Lellinge ofer mine deg mid mete. 7 mid mannum. æalswa hit stent on þet Gerard þet he beo on minum life min fulla freod. 7 forespreca. 7 mira manna. 7 efter minum dege beo þara halgan stowe. 7 þere are ful freod. 7 forespeca æt Stocæ þe mine yldran on restæp. 7 ic gean þes landes æt Lissingtune Æðelmere mines …e mid mete. 7 mid mannum ealswa hit stent. 7 hine eadmodlice bidde þæt he min fulla freod. 7 mundiend beo on minum dege. 7 efter minum dege gefelste þæt cwide 7 mira yldran standan mote.’

And I grant to the ealdorman Æthelmær the estate at Lawling after my death, with its produce and its men, just as it stands, on condition that during my life he shall be a true friend and advocate to me and to my men, and after my death, be a true friend and advocate of the holy foundation at Stoke, where my ancestors lie buried, and its property. And I grant the estate at Liston to Æthelmær my [lord’s kinsman?] with the produce and with the men, just as it stands, and humbly pray him that he will be my true friend and protector during my life and after my death will help to secure that my will and my ancestors’ wills may stand.
4. Couples

Brihtric and Ælfswith (S 1511)

‘7 ic bidde for godes lufan minne leofan hlaford . þæt he ne ðafige þæt ænig man unceran/ cwide awænde . 7 ic bidde ealle godes freond þæt hi ðarto filstan.’

And I pray by dear lord, for the love of God, that he will not allow any man to alter our will. And I pray all God’s friends that they will give their support to it.

Ordnoth and his wife (S 1524)
Wills, 5, pp. 16-18.
s. x. Ordnoth and his wife to Old Minster, Winchester. Archive: Winchester, Old Minster.

‘On ða gereðnesse is þæt land geseld to þam mynstre þæt man unc gefece. æt uncrum ændedege mid þes mynstres crafte 7 unc swylyce legerstowe forescewian swylc unc for gode þearflice sy. 7 for weorulde gerysenlic. Þis is seo gewitnes ðe Ordnod. Wile habban godæs 7 his hiredes on ealdan mynstre. þæt is þæt he 7 is wif cwædan on heora gewitnesse þæt is ðæht gangan on his freonda hand ofer his deg se dél þe he cweþe 7 se ofer dél into þære stowe þær hi restað.’

On these terms is the estate given to the minster; that on the day of our death they will fetch us with the minster’s resources and provide for us such a resting-place as is necessary for us in God’s sight and fitting in the eyes of the world. It is for this that Ordnoth wishes to have the testimony of God and his community at the Old Minster: namely, that he and his wife announced in their presence that the part of his possessions which he stated was to go into his friends’ possession after his death, and the other part to the place where they shall be buried.
5. Lay Men: Illustrious Men

Ealdorman Æthelwold (S 1504)
SEHD, 20, p. 33 (pp. 63-64).
A.D. 946 x 947. Will of Ealdorman Æthelwold. Archive: Winchester, Old Minster.

‘Her geswutelad þæt Eadred cing geuþe þæt land æt Wilig þa twelf hida to scrudfultume þam hired into Ealdan Mynstre. Leof, Æþelwold ealdorman cyþ his leofan cynehlaforde Eadred cyngæ hu ic wille ymbe þa landare þe ic æt mine hlaforde geearnode. Ærest Gode 7 þære halgan stowe æt þam bisceopstole æt Wintanceastre, þam bisceope þam hiwum, þæt land æt Wilig þa twelf hida to scrudfultume, þæt hi me on heora gebedredenne hæbben, swa swa ic him to gelyfe. 7 þam cinge minne hrægeatwa: feower sweord 7 feower spæra 7 feower scyldas 7 feower beagas, twegen on hundtwelftigum mancosun 7 twegen on hundehtaftigum, 7 feorwer hors 7 twa sylfrene fata. 7 minum breðer Eadrice þæt land æt Oceburnan 7 æt Æscesdune 7 æt Cegham 7 æt Wessingatune. 7 Æþelstane mine breðer þet land æt Bradanwætere 7 þet æt Niwantune. 7 Ælfsige mine broðorsuna þet land æt Carcel. 7 Ælfsitanes suna mines broðor þæt land æt Clare. 7 eall þæt yrfe þæ ic hæbbe on lænelandum, þonne wylle ic þæt þæt sie gedeled for mine sawle swa ic nu þam freondum sæde þæ ic to spræc.’

Here it is stated that King Eadred gave the estate of twelve hides at Wiley to the community at the Old Minster for the provision of clothing. Sire, I, ealdorman Æthelwold, declare to my dear and royal lord King Eadred, what are my wishes with regard to the estates which I have acquired from my lord. In the first place I give to God and to the holy foundation - the bishop and the community - at the episcopal see of Winchester the twelve hides of land at Wiley for the provision of clothing, so that they may remember me in their prayers, as I believe that they will. And to the king my heriot: four swords, four spears, four shields, four bracelets, two worth one hundred and twenty mancuses, and two worth eighty mancuses, four horses and two silver cups. And to my brother Eadric the estates at Ogbourn, Ashdown, Cheam, and Washington. And to my brother Æthelstan the estates at Broadwater and Newton. And to Ælfstane, my brother’s son, the estate at Carcel. And to the son of my brother Ælfsige the estate at Clere. And I desire that a distribution of all the property which I hold on lease be made for the good of my soul, according to the directions which I have just given to the friends to whom I have been speaking.
Ælfheah (S 1485)

Wills, 9, pp. 22-25.
c. A.D. 968 x 971. Will of Ælfheah, ealdorman. Archive: Winchester, Old Minster.

‘And ic wullan þæt man gefreogen ælcne witeþeowne man on ælcum þera landæ þæ ic minon freondon becwedden hæbbæ. And þisseræ gehafauncga þæ sæ cyning geuþæ is to gewitnæssæ Ælfþryþ þæs cynincges wif and Æpelwold biseçop. and Ælfhære ealdorman and Æþelwine ealdorman and Æþelwine ealdorman and Æþelwine ealdorman and Æscwig abbod.’

And I wish that every penally enslaved man be freed on each of the estates which I have bequeathed to my friends. And the witnesses of this permission which the King has granted to me are: Ælfþryþ the King’s wife, and Bishop Æthelwold and the Ealdorman Ælfhære and the Ealdorman Æþelwine and Æþelwine and Æscwig.

‘7 ic geann Ælfrice arcebisceope þæs landes æt Dumeltan forð mid þon oðran for minon sawle. Wið þan þè he freond. 7 fultum. ðe betere sy into þære stowe þe uc geworht hæbbe.’

And I grant to Archbishop Ælfric the land at Dumbleton along with the other, for my soul, in the hope that he may be a better friend and supporter of the monastery which I have founded.

The combination freond 7 fultum is repeated in a second instance:

And I grant Ufegeat the estate at Norton in the hope that he may be a better friend and supporter of the monastery.
And in third instance in Wulfric’s will:

‘7 ic wylle þ[æt] se cyning beo hlaforð. þæs mynstres ðæ ic getimbrede. 7 ðære landara þæ ic ðynderinn becweden hæbbe gode to lofe. 7 to wurðmynta minan hlaforðe 7 for minra sawle. 7 Ælfric arcebiscop. 7 Ælfhelm min broðor. þ[æt] hig beon mund. 7 freond. 7 forespreocan. into ðære stowe wið ælcne geborenne mann. Heom to nanre agenre æhta. butan into sa[nctus] Benedictus regole.’

And I desire that the king be lord of the monastery which I built and the estates which I have bequeathed to it to the glory of God and to the honour of my lord and for my soul. And that Archbishop Ælfric and my brother Ælfhelm be protectors and friends and advocates of that foundation against any man born, not as their own possession, but as belonging to St Benedict’s order.

Amen.’

Here it is declared in this document how Abbot Wulfric and Ealdred, son of the thegn Lyfing, came to an agreement about the estate at Cliffe. Through the fear of God and St Augustine and on the advice of his friends he commended himself and the estate to St Augustine’s, and every year on St Augustine’s day he shall give a pound in token, and after his death the estate shall pass to St Augustine’s, furnished as it is as that time. The witnesses of this are the community at St Augustine’s and that at Christchurch, and Lyfing, his father, and Siweard and his brother Sired and Wulfstan of Saltwood and the other Wulfstan. And this is done forever without end on behalf of the souls of Siferth and his children. Amen.

‘7 he bit his hlaford for godes lufan þæt he beo his wifes freond 7 his dohter 7 he ann his wife þæs landes æt Cylleshale.’

And he prays his lord for the love of God that he will be a friend to his wife and daughter.

Æthelsige, intermediary:

‘7 Æþelsige. leof cyð þis mine hlaforde 7 ealle mine freondum.’

And, dear Æthelsige, make this known to my lord and to all my friends.

And after the death of both of them Archbishop Eadsige shall take possession of them, if he lives longer than they, or whoever is his successor at the time, unless one of their friends can continue to hold the estates, agreeably to the archbishop, at a fair rent or in accordance with such other arrangements as may be devised at the time with the existing archbishop.
