List of Contents

Abstract 2
List of Contents 3
Acknowledgements 5
Declaration 9

Introduction: Reconstructing the Concept of Literary Authorship – Why and How 10
‘Death’ and ‘Resurrection’? A Brief History of Ideas of Authorship in Modern Literary Theories (ca. 1900 – the Present) 11
Main Issues About the Concept 19
  - Authorial Agency and Creativity 19
  - Authorial Intention and Authority 21
  - Authorship and Narrative Fiction 26
  - The Implied Author, Biographical Subject, and Selfhood 28
Why Authorship Matters 31
Potential Methods, and Design of Current Project 32

Part One: Ideas of Authorship in Nabokov’s Critical Writings 43
Chapter I “A Sonorous Void”: Authorship and Literary Communication 43
  1.1. Wrestling and Climbing: Writing and Reading as Analogous Activities 45
  1.2. Chess Problems and Riddles: Authorial Communication Foregrounded 50
  1.3. Mirrors and Masks: Literary Interpretation and Authorial Intention 53
  1.4. Inspirations Channelled: Discursive Impulses and Authorial Agency 61
Chapter II The Art of Re-Creation: Authorship and Narrative Fiction 66
  2.1. Nabokov’s Notions of Reality 66
  2.2. Beyond ‘Fictional Worlds’ 72
Chapter III “The Proximity of Work and Life”: Author as (Auto)Biographical Subject 80
  3.1. Memories: Representational Source, Communicative Intention, Discursive Impulse 81
  3.2. Stained Glass and Incomplete Painting: The Limitations of Autobiography 85
Part Two: Ideas and Practices of Authorship in Nabokov’s Novels 93
Chapter IV ‘Fictional Worlds’ Disrupted: Author as Communicative Agent 93
4.1. Precarious ‘Worlds’, Puzzling Texts, Creative Author 94
Chapter V Memories Recreated: Fiction Writing as Self-Transformation 112
5.1. Look at the Harlequins!: The Interpenetration of Memory and Imagination 113
5.2. The Real Life of Sebastian Knight: How (Not) to Read Autobiographical Allusions 119
5.3. Nabokov’s Autobiographical Allusions: Seeing One’s Past in Different Lights 125

Part Three: Ideas of Authorship in Sebald’s Critical Remarks 133
Chapter VI Author’s Roles and Challenges: Purposes and Process of Writing 133
6.1. Noble Pursuit or Questionable Business? Purposes and Scruples of Writing 136
6.2. Author as Bricoleur and Artificer: Agency and Contingencies in the Creative Process 143
Chapter VII Fictive Communication and Self-Exploration: Two Dimensions of Authorship 151
7.1. Understanding Sebald’s Overdetermined Fiction: Fictionality as Communicative Orientation 153
7.2. Self-Analysis by Proxy: Narrative and the Author’s Sense of Self 164

Part Four: Ideas and Practices of Authorship in Sebald’s Prose Fiction 176
Chapter VIII Writers as Silk Weavers: Self-Conscious Discussions of Authorship in Sebald’s Works 176
8.1. Seclusion, Compulsion, Purposes, and Scruples: Complexities in the Creative Process 179
8.2. Details and Patterns: Literary Works as (More Than) Artefacts 183
Chapter IX Rewriting the Self, Rewriting Others: Narrative as Self-Analysis and Fictionality as Communicative Orientation 192
9.2. Narrating Subject Foregrounded: Confabulation, Speculation, and Fictionality 203

Conclusion: In Defence of Theories of Authorship 214
Bibliography (List of Works Cited) 220