

Acknowledgements

I would firstly like to give a huge thank you to my supervisor, Prof. Panos Tsakiroopoulos. Throughout my PhD he has been a huge support and always there to discuss and help to interpret results. More importantly, he has always shown interest and support in my personal life throughout his time as my supervisor. It is this trait in particular that will always earn my respect and gratitude.

For funding and financial support I would like to thank the EPSRC and Rolls Royce PLC, without which I would not have been able to do my PhD. From Rolls Royce PLC I would like to thank Dr Neil Jones and Dr Ian Edmonds for their support, particularly the arrangement of access to the electron microscope in Derby.

From the vision 20 group I would like to thank the Cambridge constituent, particularly Dr Howard Stone. Without their help I would not have had ingots to study and in turn a thesis to write.

From Leeds University I would like to thank Dr Eric Condliffe and Dr Richard Walshaw for granting access to their microscopy suite and the operation of the microscopes themselves.

From the University of Sheffield I would like to thank all the technical staff that have supported me as a student over the years, in particular Dr Peter Korgul who has been a constant support with electron microscopy and Dr Dawn Busey for her help with nano-indentation.

Anybody in my research group will have experienced the highs and lows of studying these alloys, going through this has brought us all together as a group of friends, not just a group of colleagues. I would particularly like to thank Gary Bywater, Dr Andrew Tweedle and Eleftheria Karagianni for both the academic discussions and the non-academic discussions. I hope that we stay in touch and will never lose the bond we formed over these past years.

Finally I would like to thank my friends and family, specifically my Mum, Dad and Sister Lauren. Whilst they will be the first to admit they had no idea what I was actually doing, they could not have been more instrumental in helping me maintain my personality, sense of humour and most importantly, sanity.

I would like to give a special thank you to my loving girlfriend Liz, whilst under pressure to complete her own thesis, she has always happily been my first port of call when my, fears, insecurities and worries are getting the better of me. I only hope that I can provide her with the same support she rightly deserves.
